NYC takes responsibility for street tree damage

De Blasio announced that NYC homeowners will no longer be cited for cracked sidewalks caused by city trees.

Mayor de Blasio. FILE

Earlier this week, Mayor de Blasio and State Assembly Speaker Carl Heastie announced they will not send out violations for sidewalk damage caused by city trees.

"We tripled funding for tree-related sidewalk repair, but homeowners were still on the hook for problems they didn't create. As a homeowner, I know how frustrating that is. Now, if a street tree causes damage, we're taking care of it." Mayor de Blasio said.

The Department of Transportation and the Parks Department will continue to investigate sidewalk issues, but if problems are tree-related, local government will pay for repairs. Under the "Trees & Sidewalks" program, city officials will fast-track repairs at 5,500 sites.

DOT Commissioner Polly Trottenberg said in a statement, "DOT works with property owners to make our sidewalks safe, but when city-owned tree roots are the culprit, homeowners should not be liable."

She added, "We will review our records for violations and liens that can be canceled as we work closely with [the Parks Department] on this commonsense initiative."

According to a press release, DOT will be reviewing all 50,000 violations to see if they were caused by city tree or other violations.

NYC Parks Commissioner Mitchell J. Silver said in a statement, "Our more than 650,000 street trees are a tremendous resource to the city, but over the decades root growth has caused conflicts on our city's sidewalks.

"Our plan to repair all backlogged sites over the next three years, combined with new policies around sidewalk violations, will ensure that trees remain a boon to New Yorkers and not a burden," Silver added. "We're thankful for the support from Mayor de Blasio and our partnership with NYC DOT to find a path forward on this issue."

The "Trees & Sidewalks" program was created in 2005 to help benefit family homes by fixing damaged sidewalks affected by the trees. This new program will add to $16 million in funding provided in 2017. The sidewalks suffering the most will be taken care of this year.

Driver jumps Brooklyn curb, killing 10-year-old boy

A 10-year-old boy who was waiting for the bus in Brooklyn was killed Tuesday when an out-of-control SUV jumped a sidewalk, striking him.

The fatal accident happened at around 3 p.m. at a bus stop in front of a residential building on the 1600 block of Ocean Avenue when the 59-year-old driver reportedly suffered a seizure behind the wheel.

The driver lost control of the Lexus SUV before jumping the sidewalk, where Enzo Farachio was walking.

Police said Farachio was looking down at his phone when struck by the vehicle, according to NBC. After the car jumped the curb, it crashed into scaffolding in front of a building, causing some of it to collapse onto the car.

Farachio suffered neck and back trauma in the crash, and was brought to New York Community Hospital, where he was pronounced dead.

The driver and his child were sent to Kings County Hospital and were not seriously injured, outlets report.

Police have not determined whether the driver will face any criminal charges. This investigation is ongoing. It was reported that the driver told officers he had blacked out.

A few streets surrounding Ocean Avenue between Avenue K and Avenue M were closed following the incident.

Billionaire oil tycoon T. Boone Pickens dead at 91

"There is nothing better than being the underdog," he wrote.

T. Boone Pickens, a celebrated corporate raider and energy industry magnate who built an empire out of an initial $2,500 investment, died on Wednesday at age 91.

The Oklahoma-born tycoon, known for his folksy speech and ruthless business acumen, died surrounded by his family and friends, said longtime spokesman Jay Rosser.

"He was coming into the office every day until Monday," said Rosser. "He stayed active running his own portfolio."

Pickens closed his BP Capital energy hedge fund after suffering a stroke in late 2016 and due to the effects of a fall in mid-2017 that required hospitalization.

"Trading oil is not as intriguing to me as it once was," Pickens wrote more than 18 months ago on his boonepickens.com website to announce the closure of the fund. "It's no secret the past year has not been good to me, from a health perspective or a financial one."

Pickens was remembered for his contributions to advances in medical research, athletic and educational initiatives, and for advocating for increased domestic use of abundant natural gas.

"He generously shared his success with institutions and communities across Texas and Oklahoma," said former President George W. Bush.

Pickens' commitment to energy projects "will have a lasting impact on the state of Texas, and the United States of America," added Texas Gov. Greg Abbott.

In late 2017, Pickens had put his 65,000-acre Mesa Vista Ranch in the Texas Panhandle up for sale at a price of $250 million. In addition to a castle-like main building, the ranch had its own airfield, art gallery, pub, chapel and two-story dog kennel.

Pickens ran energy firms, hedge funds and wind farms, offering forecasts on oil prices and in 2008, when his fortune was estimated at $3 billion by Forbes magazine, announced the Pickens Plan for an energy independent United States. He promoted the plan in television ads and interviews and testified about it before Congress, bemoaning reliance on foreign oil and pushing the potential of wind energy.

Pickens had aspirations of creating the world's biggest wind farm in the Panhandle with the capability of powering 1.3 millions homes at a cost of $10 billion. By 2010, however, he had given up on a big-scale wind farm due to difficulties with financing and a lack of transmission lines.

Pickens had gained notoriety in the 1980s as a consummate dealmaker who launched audacious bids to take over giant oil companies including his former employer Phillips Petroleum Co., as well as Gulf Oil Corp. and Unocal Corp. with leveraged buyouts.

PROFITABLE FAILURES

He failed on all the big takeover bids but made millions of dollars in the process. With Gulf Oil, his bid drove the nation's fifth-largest oil company into a record $13.2 billion merger with Chevron Corp. and his bold moves landed him on the covers of magazines such as Forbes and Time.

"There is nothing better than being the underdog," he wrote in his 2008 book "The First Billion Is the Hardest."

"The more people count me out, the more I count myself in." REUTERS

Trump administration announces plans to ban flavored e-cigarettes

President Trump discusses regulating vaping products at the White House in Washington. REUTERS

Move comes as officials investigate related lung disease in 33 states.

U.S. President Donald Trump told reporters on Wednesday that the country has a problem with vaping, and his top health official said the Food and Drug Administration intends to remove all flavored e-cigarettes from the market.

Health and Human Services Secretary Alex Azar told reporters at a meeting with Trump in the Oval Office that children were becoming addicted to nicotine thanks to attractive flavors of e-cigarettes, and that the FDA was working on a "guidance document" that would lead to a ban of all vape flavors aside from tobacco flavoring.

"Once the FDA would finalize this guidance, we would begin enforcement actions to remove all such products from the marketplace," Azar said.

Six deaths have been linked to vaping and U.S. public health officials are investigating 450 cases of potential vaping-related lung illness across 33 states and one U.S. territory.

"We have a problem in our country, it's a new problem ... and it's called vaping," Trump said. "Especially vaping as it pertains to innocent children."

> "Once the FDA would finalize this guidance, we would begin enforcement actions to remove all such products from the marketplace."

The nationwide investigation led by the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention and the U.S. Food and Drug Administration has not definitively linked the illnesses to any specific e-cigarette product or ingredient, although health officials have expressed suspicions about the effects of inhaling vitamin E acetate, which is contained in some vaping products.

The FDA has urged consumers to avoid inhaling vitamin E acetate, buying vaping products on the street, using marijuana-derived oil with the products or modifying a store-bought vape product. REUTERS

Doctors Urge Knee Pain Sufferers

"Don't Get ANY Surgery Until You SeeThis…"

After Years Of Intense Study, NYC Medical Clinic Finally Reveals It's Best "Treatment Formula" For Helping Knee Arthritis Sufferers... Especially When So Many Other Treatments Have Failed

NEW YORK CITY - If you are even remotely interested in discovering how the latest scientific discoveries can possibly help your knee pain... then this is going is be the most exciting information you ever read.

Here is why: Knee pain can not only be brutal... it's complex. In other words, it's not a simple, easy fix.

But I'm sure you already know that. Or you wouldn't be reading this.

That's the bad news.

Now for some good news...

Over the years, NYC Pain MD has treated countless knee pain sufferers. And in that time have been able to constantly improve.

And we have come up with a treatment formula that we have found works best and helps the most patients.

This formula has reduced or even eliminated the pain in many. Some were scheduled for knee replacement surgery and felt good enough to cancel their surgery.

It's amazing when patients who were once in excruciating pain... start feeling better. And start walking again. And playing golf. Or tennis. And finally getting their lives back.

Especially when they had gone to other doctors and tried so many other things.

So many had given up hope.

Sound familiar? If it does... check this out...

The Treatment Formula

While I can't give you the entire treatment formula here (there is not enough space and WAY too complicated) I can give you the basics. And more important... I can tell you what it might be able to do for YOU.

The first and most important part of the formula is: PATIENT SELECTION.

This means, NYC Pain MD has a detailed screening process to tell who is most likely to be helped by their treatments... and who is not.

If you qualify, you have the opportunity to move forward and experience the worldclass treatments that NYC Pain MD offers.

If you do not, NYC Pain MD will tell you what they think your best options are and help you find the right doctor for you.

NYC Pain MD "Treatment Formula" A protocol of advanced medical treatments that has already helped thousands.

If you qualify, NYC Pain MD offers some of the most advanced medical treatments available today all using the most advanced imaging technology including:

- Viscosupplementation (gel injections)
- Platelet Rich Plasma (PRP)
- Stem Cell Therapy (Lipogems)
- Genicular Knee Block
- And more.

Once again, there is not enough space to go into detail about all these procedures... but here are some things you MUST KNOW....

Viscosupplementation is where a doctor introduces a gel-like medicine directly into the joint space. This helps to lubricate the joints often relieving some, most or even all of your pain. Results can last for 6 months to several years.

Many have had these treatments without good results. However, NYC Pain MD feels this is because doctors often do these "gel injections" without advanced imaging to guide them. Research shows they will often miss the joint. If the joint is missed... it is impossible for the treatment to work.

NYC Pain MD has spared no expense and used advanced imaging to guide the injections assuring the medicine gets into the joint. We frequently get results when this treatment was a failure done elsewhere.

The second thing you must know is... our treatment plans are custom made for every patent. And we have all these treatments offered in the same place. Many times you will get the best results from multiple treatments. At NYC Pain MD your doctors will all be there and will all know each other and you and your case. They work together and give you the best treatments and care without you having to go anywhere else.

The ability to select the right patients and then have the potential to give them any or all of these treatments... with all the necessary medical technology... under one roof... has allowed NYC Pain MD to get better results than they thought possible.

Here's What You Should Do Next

If you suffer with knee pain... and any of this made sense to you... NYC Pain MD would like to offer you a No-cost screening. That screening is the first step in our "Treatment Formula."

You will get to see a doctor and ask any questions you have. Your doctor will take the first steps to see if you qualify for treatments and give you recommendations.

The best thing is... you will finally get direction. You will know what's going on and what is your best course of action… step-by-step. The treatments will be explained in detail and you will breathe a big sigh of relief finally knowing what's going on and what can or cannot be done.

There is so much we want to say to help you... but I'm out of space. Give us a call at 877-296-6310 and take the first step. That step is free without obligation.

Warren rises as solid Democratic option behind Biden, Sanders: Poll

Support for senator up more than any Dem prez candidate in past month.

REUTERS / GETTY IMAGES

Support for U.S. Sen. Elizabeth Warren rose more than that of any other Democratic presidential hopeful over the past month, according to the Reuters/Ipsos poll, solidifying her status as a top contender behind Joe Biden and Bernie Sanders.

The Sept. 9-10 poll found that 11 percent of Democrats and independents said they would vote for Warren in their state's nominating contests, up 3 percentage points from a similar poll that ran Aug. 1 to 5.

Twenty-two percent said they backed Biden, the former vice president who has been the Democratic front-runner since he entered the race this year, and 16 percent said they would vote for Sanders, a U.S. senator.

Biden's support was unchanged from the previous Reuters/Ipsos poll, while Sanders dropped 2 percentage points.

Biden, Sanders and Harris will square off with seven other Democratic candidates on Thursday at a nationally televised debate in Houston. The Democratic contenders are vying for the right to take on Republican President Donald Trump in the November 2020 election.

11%

The Sept. 9-10 poll found 11 percent of Democrats and independents would vote for Warren.

Warren, a champion of consumer financial protections, has pushed for big, "structural" changes to an economy that "does great for those with money and isn't doing great for everyone else."

She wants to raise taxes on the wealthy and use the money to help pay for a number of progressive priorities including universal childcare, student debt relief and Medicare for All, which would provide federal health insurance coverage for all Americans based on the existing government-run Medicare program for Americans 65 and older.

Unlike most of the other candidates, Warren's popularity among Democrats and independents has steadily increased this year. Others, like U.S. Sen. Kamala Harris, have declined in popularity over the summer.

The September poll found that Harris and Mayor Pete Buttigieg of South Bend, Indiana, were each supported by 4 percent of Democrats and independents. Buttigieg's support was unchanged from the August poll, while Harris dipped 2 points.

New York entrepreneur Andrew Yang and U.S. Sen. Cory Booker were each backed by 3 percent.

None of the other candidates received more than 2 percent in the poll.

The Reuters/Ipsos poll was conducted online, in English, across the United States. It gathered responses from 687 adults, including 511 Democrats and 104 independents. It had a credibility interval, a measure of the poll's precision, of 4 percentage points. REUTERS

4 Things to watch at the third Democratic debate

REUTERS

Leading Democratic White House contenders Joe Biden and Elizabeth Warren will share the stage for the first time on Thursday when the top 10 candidates for the party's presidential nomination meet in a debate in Houston.

Twenty Democrats continue to vie for their party's nomination to challenge Republican President Donald Trump in November 2020, but party rules about polling and fundraising resulted in only half of them qualifying for the debate in Houston.

All of the top 10 Democrats will debate on one night, allowing voters to take stock of the leaders side-by-side.

THE TOP THREE

The condensed debate stage will generate some first-time matchups, but arguably the most anticipated is the one between former Vice President Biden, the leader in most opinion polls, and U.S. Sen. Warren of Massachusetts, who is nipping at his heels.

The two exemplify the ideological divide between the moderate and liberal wings of the Democratic Party, and the central question voters face in the 2020 primary race: Between pledges to restore pre-Trump normalcy, or embark on ambitious reform, what is a better ticket to defeat Trump in the November 2020 election?

Warren's recent gain on U.S. Sen. Bernie Sanders of Vermont in polls has also raised speculation that the two friends and progressive allies could abandon their agreement to not criticize one another.

"In Detroit, those two somewhat teamed up to defend the progressive flag of the party. Given the state of the race today, I will keep an eye on whether Sanders decides to draw a sharper contrast with Warren," said Joel Payne, a Democratic strategist who worked for Hillary Clinton in 2016.

For U.S. Sen. Kamala Harris of California and South Bend, Indiana, Mayor Pete Buttigieg, the debate presents a narrowing set of chances to break through into the top tier.

HOURS WITHOUT A GAFFE?

Biden enters the his third debate atop the field, even after his first two debate performances were criticized as lackluster, while his campaign has had to fend off questions about repeated misstatements on the campaign trail.

Biden, 76, has also faced questions from some voters about his age and whether he has the stamina to make it through a lengthy and taxing presidential race. In Houston, he will be standing next to Sanders, 78, the oldest candidate in the field.

"Biden will likely continue to take a page from Donald Trump in 2016. If you'll remember, Trump essentially just treaded water in the debates," said Payne.

"He never won any debate but he managed to stay above the fray. Biden is likely hoping that he can ride a similar strategy to get through a splintered Dem primary."

WHAT DOES SHE STAND FOR?

The candidate who has benefited the most from the debates so far is Harris — but after a well-reviewed performance in the first round, she watched the lead she amassed dwindle by the second debate when she pulled off a less-than-stellar showing. Heading into the third debate, she is struggling to break through to the top of the field.

A September Reuters/Ipsos poll found that Harris and Buttigieg were tied with 4 percent support of Democrats and independents — a big drop for the senator, who once registered at 10 percent.

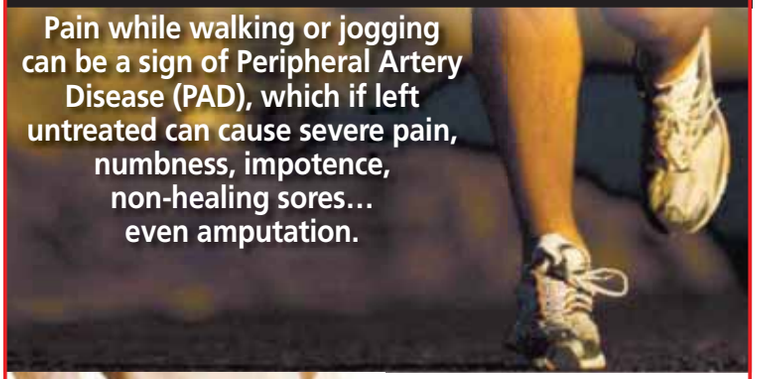
CLOSING WINDOW

For the candidates in the bottom half, such as former U.S. Housing Secretary Julian Castro, U.S. Sens. Amy Klobuchar of Minnesota and Cory Booker of New Jersey and business leader Andrew Yang, the debate provides one of their only chances to try to change the public perception of their candidacy.

But ultimately, since most of these low-polling candidates have positioned themselves between the Biden-represented centrist establishment and the left wing led by Warren and Sanders, they will struggle to gain momentum unless Biden declines, experts say. REUTERS

Leg Pain & Cramps While Walking?

Pain while walking or jogging can be a sign of Peripheral Artery Disease (PAD), which if left untreated can cause severe pain, numbness, impotence, non-healing sores... even amputation.



- Leg pain while walking that stops after few minutes at rest
- Leg numbness or weakness
- Foot or toe wounds that won't heal
- Skin discoloration or shiny skin on the leg
- One leg or foot is colder than the other
- Hair loss on your legs and feet

Smokers and people with diabetes or hypertension are more at risk for PAD.

Tweet: President asks 'boneheads' at Fed for negative interest rates, stirring investors

Subzero rates, a sign of a weak economy, could backfire, experts say.

REUTERS

U.S. President Donald Trump on Wednesday called on the "boneheads" at the Federal Reserve to push interest rates down into negative territory, a move reluctantly used by other world central banks to battle weak economic growth that risks punishing savers and banks' earnings in the process.

Trump, in a pair of Twitter posts, said negative rates would save the government money on its debt, which including Social Security accounts has reached a record $22 trillion on Trump's watch. He did not address the risks or financial market tensions that central banks in Europe and Japan have confronted as a result of their negative rate policy, or the larger issue that negative rates have not secured higher growth or higher inflation for those economies.

> "It is only the naïveté of (Fed Chairman) Jay Powell and the Federal Reserve that doesn't allow us to do what other countries are already doing."
> President Trump

"The Federal Reserve should get our interest rates down to ZERO, or less, and we should then start to refinance our debt. INTEREST COST COULD BE BROUGHT WAY DOWN, while at the same time substantially lengthening the term," Trump tweeted. "We have the great currency, power, and balance sheet... The USA should always be paying the ... lowest rate. No Inflation!

"It is only the naïveté of (Fed Chairman) Jay Powell and the Federal Reserve that doesn't allow us to do what other countries are already doing," added Trump, who has repeatedly noted that rates are negative in Germany, Europe's trading powerhouse.

The president's comments precede a week in which the world's major central banks, including the Fed, are expected to lower rates or otherwise loosen monetary policy in what is widely seen as a move to protect the global economy against risks partly rising from Trump's trade war with China.

But the quarter of a percentage point cut expected by the Fed is not likely to satisfy Trump, who has called on Powell and the Fed to quickly and dramatically cut rates as a way to boost slowing U.S. economic growth ahead of his re-election bid next year.

Last month, however, Trump told reporters at the White House that he did not want to see negative rates in the United States, and analysts on Wednesday said the still-growing U.S. economy would be put at risk if the Fed pursued them.

While perhaps appropriate in "recessionary" conditions, zero or negative rates in a growing economy with record-low unemployment "may ultimately create the next financial crisis — people taking on more risk than they would otherwise because money is even cheaper," said Mark Luschini, chief investment strategist at Janney Montgomery Scott in Philadelphia.

Still, interest accounts for about 8.7 percent of all federal outlays, down sharply from the mid-1990s when it accounted for more than 15 percent of spending following an era of ultra-high interest rates in the 1970s and 1980s, according to the Pew Research Center.

The Washington Post, citing public filings and financial experts, reported last month that Trump could also personally save millions of dollars a year in interest if the Fed lowers rates, given the outstanding loans on his hotels and resorts. REUTERS

Canada's Trudeau kicks off tough re-election campaign, faces ethics questions

REUTERS

Canadian Prime Minister Justin Trudeau kicked off a challenging six-week re-election campaign on Wednesday and immediately faced new questions about a nagging ethics scandal that could cut support for his Liberal Party.

Trudeau, who swept to office in November 2015 promising "sunny ways" and stressing the importance of gender equality and the environment, faces an electorate more focused on the economy and affordability when it votes on Oct 21.

"We have a huge amount of work still to do. ... Under a Liberal government, Canada will continue to move forward," he told reporters after launching the race.

The 47-year-old married father of three, whose colorful socks and classic good looks are often splashed across the international media, may have history on his side. Not since 1935 has a Canadian prime minister who won a parliamentary majority in his first term been booted from office in the next election.

But polls strongly suggest Trudeau may not win enough seats to govern by himself after a series of missteps that called into question his leadership while cutting into his once sky-high popularity. That would leave him weakened, relying on opposition members of parliament to push through legislation.

Last month, a top watchdog ruled the prime minister had breached ethics rules by pressuring the former justice minister to ensure a major construction firm avoid a corruption trial.

The Royal Canadian Mounted Police are probing whether there is enough evidence to lay charges. The Globe and Mail said on Wednesday that Ottawa was limiting what potential witnesses could say.

Trudeau side-stepped repeated questions about the matter on Wednesday, repeating the government's line that witnesses already had plenty of freedom to speak.

Andrew Scheer, leader of the official opposition Conservative Party, said the Globe and Mail report showed Trudeau could not be trusted.

"He has lied. He has looked Canadians in the eyes and said things that he knew were not true," he told reporters.

A Nanos Research poll released on Tuesday showed the Liberals at 34.6 percent and the Conservatives at 30.7 percent. That margin would not be enough to guarantee a majority of seats in the House of Commons.

"PUNISH THE BUMS"

Liberals say they are quietly confident of victory and predict Trudeau will campaign much more effectively than Scheer, 40, who is fighting his first election as Conservative leader.

> "This is not a 'Throw the bums out' election. This is a 'Punish the bums' election."
> Nik Nanos, head of Nanos Research

But Canadian campaigns can produce major surprises. The Liberals trailed in third place when the 2015 election was called but steadily improved to pull off an outright victory.

"This is not a 'Throw the bums out' election. This is a 'Punish the bums' election," said Nik Nanos, head of Nanos Research.

Trudeau, the son of former Liberal Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau, has broken major campaign promises by scrapping plans to introduce voter reform and allowing budget deficits to mushroom. He also angered environmentalists by buying an oil pipeline to ensure crude exports could increase.

"For average Canadians, the key takeaway ... is that Justin Trudeau is not an exception, he's like other politicians," said Nanos.

Liberals cite near-record-low jobless numbers, booming growth and lower levels of poverty as grounds for re-election. REUTERS

Bahamian officials say 2,500 people registered as missing in Dorian's wake

Bahamian officials said on Wednesday that 2,500 people have been registered as missing in the wake of the devastating Hurricane Dorian, a count they said may include people who have fled to shelters around the islands.

Officials have confirmed 50 deaths caused by the Sept. 1 storm.

REUTERS

"This list has not yet been checked against government records of who are staying in shelters or who have been evacuated," National Emergency Management Agency spokesman Carl Smith told a news conference. "The database processing is underway."

Thousands of people are in shelters on the islands. Officials have confirmed 50 deaths caused by the Sept. 1 storm but have warned that toll is likely to rise substantially.

Dorian slammed into the Bahamas over a week ago as one of the strongest Caribbean hurricanes on record, packing top sustained winds of 185 miles per hour.

Smith said more than 5,000 people had evacuated to New Providence, but that they had seen a "significant reduction" in the number of people asking to be evacuated.

Commercial flights to Abaco, one of the hardest-hit areas, will be resuming on Wednesday on a limited basis, officials said. REUTERS

Cathay Pacific to cut capacity as demand for Hong Kong travel falls

Cathay Pacific Airways Ltd. said on Wednesday it would cut capacity for the upcoming winter season after reporting an 11.3 percent fall in passenger numbers for August as anti-government protests in Hong Kong hit demand.

REUTERS

The airline said inbound traffic to Hong Kong in August had fallen by 38 percent and outbound traffic by 12 percent compared with the previous year, and it did not anticipate September would be any less difficult.

Hong Kong's finance secretary reported earlier this week that visitor arrivals plunged nearly 40 percent in August, deepening from July's 5 percent fall, as sometimes-violent anti-government protests took a rising toll on the city's tourism, retail and hotel businesses.

The weak demand and cuts to capacity will place more pressure on Cathay at a time when it is grappling with management upheaval and is trying to complete a three-year financial turnaround plan driven by boosting revenue and slashing costs.

"Given the current significant decline in forward bookings for the remainder of the year, we will make some short-term tactical measures such as capacity realignments," Cathay Chief Customer and Commercial Officer Ronald Lam said in a statement.

"Specifically, we are reducing our capacity growth such that it will be slightly down year-on-year for the 2019 winter season versus our original growth plan of more than 6 percent for the period."

Cathay has become the biggest corporate casualty of anti-government protests after China demanded it suspend staff involved in, or who support, demonstrations that have plunged the former British colony into a political crisis.

Chairman John Slosar announced plans last week to step down in November, less than three weeks after CEO Rupert Hogg left amid mounting regulatory scrutiny.

Cathay said on Wednesday demand for premium class travel had fallen more significantly than for leisure travel, with demand from mainland China and Northeast Asia severely hit. REUTERS

DANIEL JOHNSTON: 1961-2019

"True love will find you in the end
You'll find out just who was your friend
Don't be sad, I know you will
But don't give up until
True love will find you in the end
This is a promise with a catch
Only if you're looking can it find you
'Cause true love is searching too
But how can it recognize you
If you don't step out into the light, the light
Don't be sad I know you will
Don't give up until
True love will find you in the end."

Those words were written by the highly influential Austin, Texas, songwriter and visual artist Daniel Johnston. As someone who tried to understand the mysteries of existence, Johnston was unparalleled by his peers and inspired many with his lo-fi approach to bedroom-recorded pop. It was announced yesterday that Johnston passed away after suffering from a heart attack. Johnston had recently retired from touring after a life of struggling with mental illness. He continued to make art up until his death.

'There is thirst for such stories' JENNIFER LOPEZ

J-Lo conquered Toronto with her role in "Hustlers." Metro chatted with the actress and businesswoman.

MARÍA ESTÉVEZ, MWN

Oscars season is full of surprises. And recently, without a doubt, we were surprised by J-Lo's performance in American crime drama "Hustlers." It became one of the movies most commented on by critics and the public at this year's Toronto Film Festival. In the first scene of the film, Jennifer Lopez dances to "Criminal" by Fiona Apple, stunning the audience with her character, Ramona Vega, a veteran stripper. With this role — that could lead to her first Oscar nomination — the 50-year-old actress demonstrated the energy of her talent.

"Hustlers" is directed by Lorene Scafaria. It narrates the story of how a group of exotic dancers set up their own business to survive the 2008 financial crisis. Lopez acts together with Constance Wu and Cardi B, however it is her presence (J-Lo last appeared onscreen in 1998 with "Out of Sight") that really seduces the viewers.

It seems that you know, better than your character, how to face moments of crisis and success.

I've been very lucky. I knew how to keep my feet on the ground when my life took off and turned into a maelstrom. Despite what I have lived, I consider myself a simple human with many values. I have certainly achieved success, but I do not forget that I have weaknesses. I think that at this point I accept myself more.

"Hustlers" is a drama, in which women become criminals in order to survive.

There is thirst for these types of stories. We have seen male camaraderie for decades. I think the time has come to switch that attention to women. I feel very proud of the entire cast, of the director, of every woman who has participated in this film. As a producer and protagonist I can't wait to share the movie with the public.

How would you describe your character, Ramona

Vega?
This is a role dedicated to working women, friends, family. Her decisions are made for survival. I must admit that it has been the most difficult job of my entire career. Acrobats who work at a bar or exotic dancers have a life of preparation, I had to learn in six weeks and pretend that I knew what I was doing.

At 50 years old, you left the audience with an open mouth thanks to your spectacular physique.
I think that women today age differently, with other attitude. They are as fit as those of 20 years old, and the idea of how they are perceived has changed. We are attractive women with more confidence than 10 years ago. And that is very sexy for men of any age.

With your role you have demonstrated that you are one of the most versatile artists of your generation. Your ability to reinvent yourself in the world of cinema and music has turned your name into a "brand."
With fame the world around you gets smaller. My family is the most important to me. I want to dedicate this movie to the women of my life, my cousins, my mother, my grandmother. I try to keep myself mentally fit and I understand that I have much more power to say "no" than "yes." That has made me a happier woman.

Are you a businesswoman or an artist?
I think I'm both. But call me businesswoman. I like it. I feel very proud of what I have achieved.

Why did you decide to make this film?
I participated in the development of the movie. When I read a script, I have to feel it. I imagine myself living the story and, if that happens, I'm usually interested unless the finale is bad. But if the interest is kept until the end, I can see myself in the story. I always have to identify with it.

You have become a leader of the Latino community. Why is it important for you to maintain that role? Alex Rodríguez and you form the most powerful Latin couple.
We have both made ourselves, we have both succeeded and we are together. He has had to work very hard also to get where he is. It is something we both have in common. Alex was always the baseball player who struggled most to succeed, he was always famous for that. The same happens to me in my industry. We have a work ethic, we came from having nothing. We both want to help, give back part of what we have to our community and teach our children, because they are growing in a very different way from us. Their life is much more privileged than ours, however we want them to see what it means to work hard and give back to others.

J-Lo and Constance Wu. ALL PHOTOS GETTY IMAGES

How do you teach your children?
If there is something that I cannot give them it's the intelligence one acquires living in the streets. That is something that everyone has to earn by themselves. When I tell my children to be tougher and they ask me to teach them, I just can't. I get it. I know they don't have skin as hard as mine, but they have evolved emotionally. They are smarter. They outperform me, because they don't think in an old, traditional way. They are very open. It is a wonderful thing to see. I have learned to be different and teach my children differently. When you see them act differently than you would have done, it is a great reward. I can't give them the wisdom of the streets, but I do [give] a much smarter emotional education. That is the benefit of my triumph.

When I go to the gym, I scroll your Instagram to get inspired. Tell us about your secrets.
You have to put [in] the required hours, there is no other way. There are no detours. I don't kill myself as I used to do in my 20s. I used to train starting at 5 in the morning and also after shooting. I spent my life dancing and training. Now I have changed my routine. I listen to my body and train every day, but for less time. I have learned to be on the same frequency as my body. I take care of my health, my diet, I exercise. I guess I am so aware of my physique because I am an actress. I've been in front of the cameras for 20 years and I know that people look at me. I am very connected to my body and change as time goes by, but I adapt to the new circumstances. I exercise three days a week and I dance on two other days.

What motivates you?
I fight every day to improve. The challenge has always been my inspiration. I'm telling myself every morning that I can get what I want. I don't want to get stuck or start rolling downhill. I want to improve and that is always possible. It is my philosophy.

How do you improve? Do you research new technologies, advances?
I am always up-to-date with what is happening. There is always a new fashion, a new madness to join. Pilates or Soul Cycle or the new truth of all truths. I have been training with Tracy Anderson for years and between the two of us, we have found what works for me. Each person is different. When you reach a point where you get stuck, you must change the routine. You have to do more or something different. You have to constantly explore.

Tell us about your skincare.
I am preparing a beauty line that I will probably launch next year. It's something I've been working on. I have learned many secrets over the years, I have collected so much information and I am ready to share it. People want to know what I do and, it is true, I have several secrets that work. But I will not share them until I launch my product.

A (realistic) guide to gradually stopping consuming meat

If you want to stop consuming meat, whatever the reason may be, these small changes can make a difference.

LUZ LANCHEROS, MWN
letters@metro.us

Devastating wildfires that destroyed the Brazilian Amazon have left several problems on the table. The most serious one is the deforestation caused by extensive agriculture and livestock. In fact, if you talk about the latter, it takes at least 20 times less land to feed a vegan than a carnivore and up to 4.5 kilograms of grain are needed to produce just 0.4 kg of meat, according to PETA's (People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals) official website. In fact, more than 90 percent of the land of the Amazon cleared since 1970 is used for extensive livestock. One of the crops in the rainforest is soy, used for it.

Furthermore, the data on the use of water is scandalous: A single cow can drink up to 189 liters of water per day and more than 9,080 liters of water would be needed to produce 0.4kg of meat. Not counting the effects of the gases generated by these animals, or the lack of processing of wastewater from livestock.

But if for you the Amazon stopped being important after #PrayForTheAmazonas, think about what red meat can do to your body: Your heart, for example, would benefit if you stopped eating meat. A 2013 study by the University of Oxford showed that vegetarian nutrition could reduce the risk of heart disease by 32 percent. And if you talk about cancer, WHO put processed meats in the same category of risk generators such as asbestos and tobacco. It also influences as a risk factor for diseases such as diabetes, stroke and obesity, among others.

According to the U.N., over 300 million cows were slaughtered in 2016. The countries that most sacrificed animals were the United States, Brazil and China.

189
A single cow can drink 189 liters of water per day. More than 9,080 liters of water are needed to produce 0.4kg of meat.

But how much can we really cut out meat and how?

Small steps to make a big change

It is well-known that if a food is eliminated from your diet radically, anxiety for it will increase. And a person's health condition should always be evaluated.

"You have to do a previous evaluation, with laboratory tests, blood counts. See if there is no anemia or nutritional deficiencies before making that decision," Susana Dávila Herrera, nutritionist, says. She explains that when you start replacing meat, you can consume more carbohydrates to give the body that feeling of satiety. But this change must be gradual and above all, protein replacement is key.

"You have to look for replacements. Chicken, fish and egg, which is a protein of high biological value. That is, it is a very good protein, almost 100 percent absorbable by the body and does not increase cholesterol. It also has vitamins and minerals. There are also vegetable proteins such as tofu, lentil and in salads you can include cheese, yogurt, peanuts, nuts. And you should not resort to processed meats. That should not be in anyone's diet," she adds.

But how to cut it out if just the smell of some meat being cooked can turn anyone into that crazy shark from "Finding Nemo"? Well, you have to make sacrifices.

"It's like when you want to lose weight: You will have to say no to sugar. And it is better to do it little by little, until it becomes a habit and the taste is not necessary. And you have to do it right, with the help of a professional. If you cut out meat and have a good diet, you won't even need to supplement," she concluded.

Maybe it's more a matter of habits than hashtags.

THE TREND OF 'MEAT THAT IS NOT MEAT'

Impossible Foods

They do everything based on science, but above all, they recreate popular "meat" dishes, but plant-based. They even recreate the flavor. They started with the hamburger in 2016 and by 2019, they had already improved the recipe with 30 percent less sodium and 40 percent less saturated fat. They have announced partnerships with Burger King, among other restaurants. Beyond Meat, their competitor, did the same with KFC and the two are already public companies. Impossible has $300 million in investor funds and Beyond more than $10 billion in market funds. Their premises are based on the fact that these products are made from plants but they taste like meat. There are also studies of products made with animal cells, which are still not on the market.

Herbal meat successfully recreates the taste of the animal. ISTOCK

A real forest moved to a football stadium

UNANIMO

Temporary art intervention

You have probably never imagined seeing a small forest inside a football stadium. Austrian artist and architect Max Peintner captured it in a drawing, which inspired the Swiss curator Klaus Littmann to make it a reality. He transformed the Wörthersee football stadium in Austria into a native Central European forest, as part of the FOR FOREST project, which has recently opened to the public. MWN

This is how the forest looks from inside the stadium. UNANIMO

"With this art intervention, I would like to challenge our perception of nature and sharpen our awareness of the future relationship between nature and humankind."
Klaus Littmann, curator

Dreaming of living in a new place? Here's how to make it a reality

NerdWallet is a personal finance website.

Even if you love your home, there's a chance it isn't in your ideal place to live. But the space between fantasizing about your dream location and actually moving there is potentially miles and thousands of dollars apart.

Just over a quarter (26 percent) of Americans aren't living in their ideal location type — whether that's a city, suburb, small town or rural area — according to a new survey from NerdWallet. There are many reasons people live where they do — better school districts, proximity to work, bigger yards, and nearby friends and family, for example. And, according to the survey, financial obstacles are among the most common reasons why people don't leave.

"Moving and getting a new place are major financial events," says Holden Lewis, NerdWallet mortgage expert. "But long before you cross those big items off your list, you'll tackle a lot of smaller tasks. Some are enjoyable, like browsing real estate listings for homes you like, and others are merely necessary."

Here's how to bring your dream move closer to reality in the coming months and years:

ISTOCK

1. Get real

Moving to a new home, let alone moving to a completely different location, is a big, expensive step. And sometimes the idea of new surroundings is more appealing than the real thing. You want to live in the city, but are you really ready for the steep cost of living, the noise and the little-to-no backyard? If you dream of small town or country living, are you ready to leave the excitement of the city and its amenities behind?

Weigh your options carefully before committing to a major move, and understand such a big step could take significant effort.

2. Move-proof your credit

Approval on a rental or mortgage application will depend, at least in part, on your credit. And if your credit needs work, making it approval-worthy could take some time.

Start by reviewing your credit report and looking for errors. Then, make sure you're paying your bills on time — your payment history accounts for as much as 35 percent of your credit score. Also, try to use no more than 30 percent of your available credit — higher credit utilization can weigh down your score significantly.

3. Attack debt

In the survey, 1 in 5 (20 percent) Americans not living in their ideal location say they have too much debt to afford moving and still have enough left for housing costs. Paying down debt not only boosts your credit, it also frees up your money for other things, like moving expenses.

But tackling debt can mean major sacrifices. Cutting excess spending or taking on a part-time job could speed up the process. Of the folks not living where they would like, 38 percent say they would take on a job to make the move possible, while 28 percent would give up travel. More than 1 in 5 (21 percent) say they would stop or reduce their retirement savings — a concerning approach because it could do more harm than good.

Take a critical look at your budget — how much money is coming in and where it's going. Then, make paying down debt a priority, but not to the detriment of your future financial security; try to leave your retirement fund alone.

Thomas, Jets could be perfect match

The veteran receiver might be getting a second chance to star in the NFL with the Jets.

JOE PANTORNO
joseph.pantorno@metro.us

The Jets traded for veteran wide receiver Demaryius Thomas shortly after Quincy Enunwa (inset) was lost for the season with a neck injury. GETTY IMAGES

The New York Jets will be wide receiver Demaryius Thomas' fourth team in the past year — the four-time Pro Bowler suddenly becoming pro football's newest nomad.

The 31-year-old has gone from the Denver Broncos to the Houston Texans, to the Patriots, before landing with the Jets, who had to give a sixth-round draft pick to New England to get him.

While Thomas has seemingly been written off around the NFL, being acquired by New York could provide a mutualistic relationship between the veteran pass catcher and his team.

The move suggests that the Jets aren't happy with the current state of their wide receiving corps after their Week 1 loss to the Buffalo Bills.

Second-year quarterback Sam Darnold had a great connection with his newest slot receiver, Jamison Crowder, as the two hooked up on 14 receptions for 99 yards.

Darnold's next-leading receiver was running back Le'Veon Bell, although he's one of the best dual-threat backs in the league.

When it came to other Jets wide receivers, though, Robby Anderson, Josh Bellamy and Quincy Enunwa combined for just five receptions and 34 yards.

And head coach Adam Gase didn't mince his words when calling out his pass catchers on Monday.

"Yeah, I mean, if we just make plays on the balls that we actually threw down the field, that's a different number," Gase said. "I mean, we had opportunities. We had a chance to win the game... Guys need to do a better job of executing what they're supposed to be doing."

Considering Thomas is an outside receiver with big-play capabilities, that's bad news for Anderson. Though his acquisition now provides crucial depth after it was announced Wednesday that Enunwa will be out for the season after injuring his neck for the second time in three years.

There is no denying that Thomas is exiting his prime years, which was accelerated after he ruptured his Achilles with the Texans.

From 2012-2017, the 6-foot-3 receiver averaged 95 receptions and 1,303 yards per season before falling out of favor in Denver, prompting the trade to Houston.

The Patriots took a flyer on Thomas as he recovered from his injury and he was able to suit up for the final game of the preseason against the Giants.

He looked good, reeling in seven catches for 87 yards and two touchdowns, but the Patriots released him during final roster cuts only to sign him a few days later.

New England's sudden — and depending on who you ask, suspicious — signing of Antonio Brown this week made Thomas the odd man out once again.

Now, Thomas will be entering a system where he could very well compete for the No. 1 receiver job while providing Darnold with a proven outside receiver.

During Thomas' prime years (2012-2017), Brown was the only receiver during that stretch with more targets and receptions. Thomas' catch rate of 62 percent during that span is also a solid mark for an outside receiver.

It would be unfair to place those kinds of expectations on his shoulders, but Thomas could provide Darnold with the best receiver he's ever worked with during his young career.

AB awaits NFL action amidst sexual assault charges

The Patriots wide receiver has been accused of raping his former trainer.

joseph.pantorno@metro.us

The saga that has been the Antonio Brown story took a much darker turn on Tuesday when a New York Times report from Ben Shpigel revealed the 31-year-old has been accused of raping his former trainer, according to a federal lawsuit filed in the Southern District of Florida.

The lawsuit lists three separate incidents in June 2017 and May 2018 in which Brown allegedly sexually assaulted a former classmate at Central Michigan, Britney Taylor, who then became his trainer.

From Shpigel's report:

"According to the suit, Brown sexually assaulted Taylor twice during training sessions in June 2017. First, he exposed himself and kissed her without permission, the lawsuit says. Later that month, the lawsuit says, while they were streaming religious programming on a tablet at his South Florida home, Brown started masturbating behind Taylor and ejaculated on her back. The lawsuit contains images of profane messages that Taylor says Brown sent to her about the incident. ...

"Then, the lawsuit says, on May 20, 2018, Brown forced her onto a bed, pushed her face into the mattress and 'forcibly' raped her. She tried to resist him, screaming and repeatedly shouting 'no' and 'stop,' the lawsuit says, but Brown refused and penetrated her."

Brown's representation denied any wrongdoings and suggested they would take further action to clear his name.

"Mr. Brown denies each and every allegation in the lawsuit," Darren Heitner, his attorney, released in a statement. "He will pursue all legal remedies to not only clear his name, but to also protect other professional athletes against false accusations."

While legal action is being pursued, the NFL looks to be acting quickly in its impending investigation.

Commissioner Roger Goodell reportedly will consider placing Brown on the league's exempt list, according to Mark Maske of the Washington Post on Wednesday.

Brown would be immediately ineligible to play for the New England Patriots — the team he signed for on Monday following a messy split with the Oakland Raiders — if he were placed on that list.

Goodell most notably used the exempt list with Adrian Peterson and Greg Hardy in 2014 when both men faced criminal charges in domestic violence cases.

He also allowed Brown to practice with the team on Wednesday.

Taylor made it known that she would be willing to cooperate with the NFL in its investigation and is planning to meet with the league next week, per ESPN's Adam Schefter.

This isn't always the case, which was seen recently when Kansas City Chiefs star Tyreek Hill's suspension was lifted due to a lack of cooperation when delving into allegations of abuse of his 3-year-old son.

Taylor's availability would allow Goodell and the NFL to assess other evidence and then speak with Brown promptly as his future in the NFL and with the Patriots is currently in doubt.
